Criteria for evaluating examination papers in the discipline "Neurology"

Semester control is carried out in the form of a semester exam in the discipline in the amount of educational material defined by the working program of the discipline "Neurology" in the terms established by the working curriculum, individual curriculum of the student. A student is considered to be admitted to the semester exam in the discipline if he attended all classes provided by the curriculum in the discipline, performed all types of work provided by the work program of the discipline and during the study scored at least the minimum (72 points).

Methods of conducting the semester exam and examination questions in "Neurology":

The semester exam is conducted in writing during the examination session, according to the schedule. The form of the exam is standardized and includes control of theoretical and practical training. The exam monitors the theoretical and practical training of students.

There are 4 questions in the exam tickets:

- 1. Questions from general neurology (topical diagnosis of levels of damage to the nervous system).
- 2. Diseases of the nervous system (etiology, pathogenesis, clinic, diagnosis, treatment, prognosis, etc.).
- 3. Solving the clinical case (indicate pathological symptoms, syndromes; establish the level of damage; clinical diagnosis, treatment).
- 4. Practical skills in the examination of neurological status.

The maximum number of points that a student can score when taking the exam is 80. The minimum number of points when taking the exam is not less than 50.
